TOM DRURY READS FROM HIS WORK

Tom Drury is the author of five novels and numerous short stories and essays. A native of Iowa, he confronts his readers with intricacies of life in American small towns and the Midwest in many of his stories' literary worlds. Drury achieved early recognition with his novel The End of Vandalism (1994), which was picked as an ALA Notable Book in 1995 and has been described as a "masterpiece" and a "slow march to greatness" by The Independent.

Tom Drury will read from his 'Midwest Trilogy,' which consists of his most recent book Pacific (2013), Hunts in Dreams (2000), and The End of Vandalism (1994).
